DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

MATCHED came about one night while I was sitting in front of the fireplace, hoping for inspiration. As I watched the flames and the shadows they cast, the idea to light a film entirely by fire came to me. I had been tempted to try it before, but always opted for a lighting gag instead of real flame. This time, however, I was set on using only a match for the light.

I knew the matches would not only illuminate the film, but would be a key part in the story, adding suspense and mystery.
